The screenshot shows the TAS (TLD Application System) interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with 'TAS' and a dropdown arrow, and links for 'Alerts', 's.vo', and 'Sign Out NewgTLDs'. Below this is a tabbed interface with 'Home' and 'Applicant Profiles'. The 'Applicant Profiles' tab is active, showing a 'Manage Applicant Profiles' section. This section has a table with columns 'Profile Name' and 'Company Name'. Below the table, it says 'No results'. At the bottom, there's a button labeled 'Add Applicant Profile' with the text 'Create additional applicant profiles' underneath it.

The ability to add applicant profiles is only for users that are completing the application process on behalf of other applying entities.

Those users will be required to create Applicant Profiles different from the User Profile.

Where an Applicant is the applying entity, the Applicant Profile is automatically created from the User Profile so no action is required on this screen.

2000 proof-of-concept round Application Credit

Participants in ICANN's proof-of-concept application process in 2000 may be eligible for a credit toward the evaluation fee. The credit is in the amount of USD 86,000 and is subject to:

- submission of documentary proof by the applicant that it is the same entity, a successor in interest to the same entity, or an affiliate of the same entity that applied previously;
- a confirmation that the applicant was not awarded any TLD string pursuant to the 2000 proof-of-concept application round and that the applicant has no legal claims arising from the 2000 proof-of-concept process; and
- intention to submit an application, which may be modified from the application originally submitted in 2000, for the same TLD string that such entity applied for in the 2000 proof-of-concept application round.

Each participant in the 2000 proof-of-concept application process is eligible for at most one credit. A maximum of one credit may be claimed for any new gTLD application submitted according to the process in this guidebook. Eligibility for this credit is determined by ICANN.

You may only apply for this credit once, regardless if the request is approved or rejected. Your documentary proof MUST include all listed criteria above.
